Letter from the editor

Dear Colleagues

We have the pleasure of introducing the newest issue of Arab World English Journal (AWEJ) to you. We are glad to inform you that AWEJ has accomplished a good international academic recognition and concern in six months. Here is some information we would like to share with you: AWEJ has been recognized by THE LINGUIST LIST (International Linguistics Community online) as an international applied linguistic journal <http://linguistlist.org/pubs/journals/browse-journals.cfm> , two of the main online e book websites ( Scribd , <http://www.scribd.com/doc/49801726/9/REFERENCES> and e Book browse <http://ebookbrowse.com/37-8-8-pdf-d54822695>) are known of their credibility have chosen most of AWEJ's papers of previous issues and have downloaded them for international readers in the fields. Also, British Council in Damascus e News has posted AWEJ on its first page http://www.britishcouncil.org/syria\_talking\_english\_enews\_january\_2011-2.pdf., giving detailed information about AWEJ and announcing the call for papers In addition, AWEJ has received a number of invitations to attend international conferences. We are sincerely thankful to our colleagues for these kind initiatives and we hope we could work together for better achievements in teaching and learning English language. AWEJ will publish these international activities in our website. Moreover, we would like to confirm to our respected readers in spite of Arab World English Journal (AWEJ) don't have sponsors yet, all AWEJ issues will remain free of access to our readers. Readers can save and organize AWEJ articles -- and any pages from around the Web.

Finally, we are so happy to break the news that AWEJ's team is now more than sixty of selected and distinguished academic scholars from all around the global and they are covering all English language areas. This good start bodes well not only for AWEJ and our readers, but also for English language learners all over the world.

Kind regards

Editor
